STUDY OUTLINE

Data to be Furnished to Contractor

The Contractor assumes that available data on performance of applicable ground environment, applicable interceptor aircraft, interceptor radar and other avionics systems, and air-to-air armament will be furnished by the Procuring Agency. Wherever possible, data will be furnished in a form suitable for immediate use in performing the study. In cases where the data is considered firm by the Procuring Agency, such will be indicated to the Contractor. Where data is judged to be based on doubtful speculation or extrapolation, every effort will be made within the bounds of security to furnish the Contractor with raw data.

The Contractor further assumes that adequate data on the electromagnetic characteristics of the target vehicle in the spectral region of interest will be furnished, or other data from which such characteristics may be calculated. Speed and altitude of the target will be as defined by the Procuring Agency.

Method of Approach

The central task of the study will be that of performing calculations of the likelihood of success of certain designated air-to-air intercept missions against the designated target vehicle. These calculations will be performed in three separate operations. First, reasonable optimum intercept tactics will be deduced from data furnished. Second, using a suitably modified intercept model, the probability of successful conversion of the interceptor to a missile firing course will be computed. Finally, an estimate will be made of the weapon effectiveness.

Ancillary to the central task, work will be performed to augment the quality, wherever possible, of the data on the interceptor weapons systems. Data which is designated by the Procuring Agency as firm will be used without question, but all other data will be subjected to the scrutiny of senior analytical personnel to test its reasonableness. Suspected discrepancies will be discussed with designated Procuring Agency personnel and suitable agreements reached before proceeding. Records will be kept of major arbitrary decisions regarding data, and of the rationale used to make such determinations.

Cases to be Studied

Cases to be studied are to be designated by the Procuring Agency. In discussions held on 6 February 1963, it has been agreed that first attention will be given to potentially high capability intercept systems. In the event that these systems are found unsuccessful, proof that the target is invulnerable to all lower capability interceptor systems should
